Children's Trail

Children's trail

Charly was a railway. An information board right at the start of the children's trail explains all you need to know about Charly and his story. On the trail, you will also learn plenty about the plants and animals. You can have a phone call with a tree, and hear your echo. At the animal long jump, you can see who can jump further: you or the forest animals?

On the last section of the children's trail, you can go on the hunt for Charly. That's because the trail follows the route the little train used to travel along. And if you are still not tired out after the long tunnel, you can let off steam at the playground right by Charly's old station.
